

treasures, as one of the most valuable treasures of human intellect. — I read it aloud to some of my friends, and my copy of the Liberator which contains it, is now circulating freely in the town.] I see that it is published in a pamphlet form: will you kindly send me 3 dozen of it. — I will permit the anti-with my neat subscribers to the Liberator & Standard. —

Have you heard whether Mr Sargant has obtained the facts for which I wrote?
I hope that he and his family are now in good health again. —

I see that Parker Pillsbury is with you again. — Will you present to him the warm and affectionate remembrances of my wife and myself. I can well imagine how he enjoyed the pleasure of seeing his own friends after so long an absence. — He has endeared himself to many, and if he crosses the Atlantic once again, he will find that many a home will receive him as welcome guest indeed! — There are many in Bradford who enquire for him, & think with pleasure and interest of his visit here. — My wife and I traveled to Bingen with him in spirit this year, & enjoyed the scenes we saw together over again down to the memorable Thunder Storm, which I am sure he will not have forgotten.

But I am rambling, and indeed if I wish to catch this week post I must now conclude

remaining ever most faithfully

Yours
